I asked grandpa, how did you survive before?
No technology, no internet, no open app store
No computer, no cell phone, no email line
He said, we lived with compassion and kindness in mind

After school we played, face to face with friends
Yo-yos, chess, laughter that never ends
Umbrella rides on a rainy day
Summer breaks where we laughed all the way

Today's morals don't look like yesterday
Yesterday's values have faded away
What is right? I'll leave it up to you
Modern world, the choice is up to you, to yooooou

No mobile phones, no "like" or "comment"
We laughed in person, not through an emoji moment.
Neighbors' doors open, gardens filled with light
We gathered and shared stories deep in the night
No blocks, no ghosts, no silent rage
No algorithms writing our page
What you see today is technology's face
But back then, love was our interface

Today's morals don't look like yesterday
Yesterday's values have faded away
What is right? I'll leave it up to you
Modern world, the choice is up to you, to yooooou

No tablets glowing, no reading lights
We wrote in diaries under stars at night
And under an Aladdin lamp's soft glow
We dreamed of futures we didn't yet know
The magic was simple, the stories were real
A light of hope that time can't steal
No CD players, no streaming speed
We played real instruments, planted real seeds
And yet I'd never trade those days
For all the modern world displays

Today's morals don't look like yesterday
Yesterday's values still light the way
What is right? I'll leave it up to you
Modern world, don't forget what's truuuue
