I look into the mirror and wonder what you see in me that I could never see All those years I lived in the dark blamed myself for your cold heart

Now I know - I finally know, it wasn't my fault
You're guilty as charged for the loveless years

How dare you! How dare you!
Treat love like a weapon, tear hearts in two
How dare you! How dare you!
I'm done carrying your blame - the shame belongs to you

I was blind not to see what was obvious to everyone but me So generous, so forgiving always hoping for your love and giving

A little act of kindness, a gentle smile a word of support - all I longed for a while

Now I know - I finally know, it wasn't my fault
You're guilty as charged for the loveless years

How dare you! How dare you!
For every tear you made me cry
How dare you! How dare you!
I see through your cold disguise
It was never me - it's all you

The less you gave, the more I tried the less you cared, the more I cried Now it all makes sense - your love was just pretense

You're blinded by anger, poisoned by pride trapped in your prison, no light inside

How dare you! How dare you!
You can't break me anymore
How dare you! How dare you!

I'm walking out that door
Look into the mirror - yes, you.
The hate, the blame, the anger... are all your reflection, not mine

I say it once again: How dare you! Goodbye!
