Sky, your name still whispers in the dark...
Twelve days of terror, twelve nights with no spark.
And while the bombs fall, while the world turns blind,
Your story echoes theirs, all intertwined

Sirens wailin', shadows on the wall,
Families hiding, praying through it all
Twelve days of terror, I can't erase,
Every child's tear looks like your face
Missiles fallin' like a thief in the night,
We ask the heavens - who gave 'em the right?
A sky so heavy, it can't even breathe,
We bury our hopes, we bury our grief

Under the same sky, we bleed, we cry,
Different lands, but the same goodbye.
Under the same sky, we pray, we scream,
Still chasing peace like a broken dream

Snow turns crimson, tanks roll slow,
Mothers hold children, nowhere to go
Church bells drowned by the siren's call,
Homes collapse, but we build new walls
A boy with a toy, now holds a gun,
Learning too early what war has done
From Kyiv streets to the eastern plains,
The sky keeps watch, it knows our pain

Under the same sky, we bleed, we cry,
Different lands, but the same goodbye.
Under the same sky, we pray, we scream,
Still chasing peace like a broken dream

Ash covers roses, silence in the air,
A mother screams - her child's not there
Streets full of rubble, hearts full of scars,
Children still wishin' on broken stars.
Hunger's a weapon, they beg for bread,
Shot in the streets, left cold and dead
Lines for food turn into graves,
The sky looks down, but who will save?
Reporters with cameras, truth in their eyes,
Killed for the stories, their silence implied
Under one sky, bombs still fall,
Yet we dare to hope, we dare to call

Iran, Ukraine, Gaza - same pain, same sky,
Different names, different streets, but the fire's still high
Crying babies in warzones, voices fade
Homeless hearts in the mess they made
Under the same sky, we bleed, we cry,
Different lands, but the same goodbye,

Under the same sky, we pray, we scream,
Still chasing peace like a broken dream.
Under the same sky, we bleed, we cry,
Why can't we rise, get up, unify?

Under the same sky, we pray, we scream,
Still chasing peace like a broken dream.
Sky, your name still rises with the dawn,
Even in the rubble, your light lives on
It's never too late, the world can try,
To find its peace... under the same sky
